Ash defeats Ravana

Just as Rama defeats Ravana, so too does Ash Mistry, a 13 year old boy from West Dulwich, London.

When Ash discovered the aastra that Rama had used to defeat Ravana, a splinter of the aastra went into Ash's hand, giving him greater powers than he could ever have imagined.

Not only that, but the aastra was the Kali-Aastra a weapon made by, the goddess of Death. The power Kali had given the aastra enabled Ash to kill Ravana from the powers held within his own hand.

However, image an aastra made by another god and instead of bringing death brought immortality and gave Ravana the power to be reborn.

Imagine if Ash hadn't succeeded. Imagine if Ravana had won.
What would the world be like?

Can you write a different ending for the story, where evil overcomes good?

"Ash drew back his fist…..

Ravana – illustration by Sarwat Chadda

© HarperCollins Children's Books 2012